Stampede beams up Shatner as Parade Marshal

Team endeavour. Speed skaters Gilmore Junio and Denny Morrison to serve as honorary marshals

ROBSON FLETCHER
robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

William Shatner. Will lead. The 2014 Calgary Stampede Parade. As the. Official. Grand Marshal.

Stampede president Bob Thompson made the announcement — in less halting speech — via a YouTube post Tuesday.

The online video features Shatner arguing over the phone with Calgary-based speed skaters Gilmore Junio and Denny Morrison over who would be best to lead the parade.

Thompson eventually sorts the matter out: The speed skaters, who captured the nation's attention during the Sochi Olympics when Junio gave up his spot to Morrison in the 1,000-metre event, will serve as honorary parade marshals.

The video was "lots of fun" to make, Thompson told Metro Tuesday, and he expects hosting Shatner will be, too.

"We'll give him a good dose of Calgary Stampede while he's here, for sure," Thompson said.

In a statement, Shatner said he's looking forward to taking part.

"I've been to Calgary before, but I have never been to the Calgary Stampede — leading the parade will be quite a way to experience my first time," he said.

The announcement came as a delight to local Shatner fans like Gord Burt, who grew up watching the Montreal-born actor playing Captain Kirk on the original Star Trek series and has been a "true fan" ever since.

"His character just appealed to me," Burt said. "I even used to take a picture of Shatner as Kirk into my barber and say, 'Give me the Captain Kirk cut.'"

Dan Jeffrey said it was "incredibly exciting" to hear Shatner would be leading the parade this year.

"I've been an avid fan since the Star Trek original series, of course," he said. "I'm almost embarrassed to say it, but I was a big fan of T.J. Hooker and all of the shows where he was (attorney) Denny (Crane)."

The Calgary Stampede runs July 4-13, with the parade beginning at 9 a.m. on July 4.

Social enterprise on the menu for Sunalta community hall

Sunalta community association president Nick Twyman stands outside his neighbourhood hall in the shadow of Calgary's West LRT line. BRYAN WEISMILLER/METRO

Facelift. Sunalta hall is envisioned to operate as a community kitchen and coffee shop on a non-profit basis

BRYAN WEISMILLER
bryan.weismiller@metronews.ca

Neighbourhood leaders in Sunalta are cooking up plans to construct a community kitchen and coffee shop in their aging community centre.

Community association president Nick Twyman pictures the centre as a place where Beltline residents can whip up meals, take cooking lessons and even find after-school jobs.

Twyman says the kitchen concept is part of a big-time facelift, and it would operate on a non-profit basis with the profits funnelling back into the community.

"Ultimately, it's a great centrifugal force in the neighbourhood to bring people down," he said Tuesday.

Unlike other inner-city neighbourhoods like Ramsay where the community centre is underused, the Sunalta hall is said to be in high demand. However, Twyman outlined a divide between more transient apartment dwellers and more established families living in the single-family homes.

"We're trying to bring the neighbourhood all together into common area," he said Wednesday. "It's the whole community hub concept."

The changes would complement the existing dance hall space, according to Twyman.

Leslie Evans, executive director at Federation of Calgary Communities, labelled Sunalta's seven-decade-old building "way past its lifecycle," adding it's not the only community eyeing stronger community ties.

"Each community is going about things in a different way, which is part of the uniqueness of the community association movement," said Evans, whose organization oversees roughly 150 communities.

Area. Coun. Druh Farrell has backed a push toward building more flexible community spaces, adding the municipal and provincial authorities are looking at easing some regulations.

Spencer West, Hedley thank students

We Create Change. Motivational speaker stops by Bishop O'Byrne as part of a Free the Children initiative celebrating fundraising efforts

JESSICA PATTERSON
calgary@metronews.ca

Motivational speaker Spencer West thanked Calgary students at Bishop O'Byrne Catholic School in the city's southwest for the work they've done for their community.

"I wanted to flip the tables and make sure they're the ones getting the recognition, not us," West said Tuesday.

West is on a cross-Canada, 90-stop, 10-week tour called We Create Change. The tour aims to celebrate fundraising efforts in support of Free the Children's Year of Education Initiative. The initiative's goal is to build 200 schools and school rooms in developing countries.

Tuesday's event also included a special appearance by 11-year-old motivational speaker Hannah Alper, Toronto pop rockers Neverest and Vancouver rock band Hedley.

"We're big supporters of Free the Children, and in particular We Create Change, because it represents some of the fundamental principles we hold dearly, one of those being education," said Hedley frontman Jacob Hoggard.

"It's so encouraging for us to see a generation of kids thinking globally. It's something most adults may have a hard time doing."

The event was something Bishop O'Byrne students

Paige Rutledge, 18, and Mackenzie Myles, 17, didn't see coming. Rutledge and Myles were named "champions of change" when the tour came through and got the opportunity to show their special guests around the school.

The school raised more than $3,000 for We Day initiatives, more than $8,400 for Rockathon and more than $8,000 for Run for a Cure.

City one of the most traffic-congested in Canada: Study

Calgary ranks as the fifth-most congested city in Canada in an annual study of traffic data from a GPS-navigation company.

It takes 22 per cent longer, on average, for Calgary drivers to get to their destinations in traffic compared to a free-flow situation, according to the "TomTom Traffic Index," which uses anonymous data from GPS devices to measure travel times.

Vancouver ranked the highest in Canada with a congestion level of 35 per cent, followed by Toronto at 27 per cent, and Ottawa and Montreal at 26 per cent.

The study also broke down congestion levels by times of day.

The evening rush hour is the worst for Calgary traffic, with travel times increasing 49 per cent. The morning rush hour saw travel-time increases of 38 per cent.

Calgary Chamber of Commerce policy director Justin Smith said "all options" need to be on the table to build better transportation infrastructure to alleviate the city's congestion problems.

"Obviously Calgary is facing some serious growth pressures," Smith said.

Ho-hum

Alberta in for an average summer

The Weather Network released its annual summer forecast on Tuesday and predicts normal temperatures and normal precipitation levels throughout most of Alberta.

Areas near the Rockies will see slightly higher temperatures, which could pose a risk for forest fires, the network said.

Rockyview. Judge calls for better signs after drowning death

In the wake of the 2011 drowning death of a psychiatric patient, Rockyview General Hospital should erect signs to better demarcate its boundaries near the Glenmore Reservoir, according to a provincial court judge.

That was the only recommendation Judge Karim Jivraj made as part of the fatality inquiry into the death of 52-year-old Trinh My Tran, who was undergoing treatment for schizophrenia.

The inquiry concluded that Tran drowned on June 5, 2011, after walking away from the hospital on an off-unit privilege, although it was "undeterminable" whether she died by accident, suicide or some other method.

Stephen Mandel. Former mayor backs Jim Prentice for PC leadership

Edmonton's former mayor Stephen Mandel threw his arms around Jim Prentice on Tuesday, endorsing the former federal cabinet minister and declining to rule out his own return to politics.

Mandel said he believed Prentice would be an excellent premier, saying he has a firm understanding of the challenges facing Alberta's cities.

"Mr. Prentice and his team have a great vision for what cities can be and the necessity to work with them," Mandel said. "I am truly honoured to be part of this team."

Prentice said he doesn't support new taxes for cities, but said the province has to work more closely with them to make sure they succeed.

"We can't have year-to-year funding disagreements, funding pressures and an inability of our cities to plan how they are go-

Prentice said he was honoured to have the mayor's endorsement and he hopes to persuade Mandel to run for the Progressive Conservatives. Mandel said he hasn't made any decision on that.

"I am not ruling out anything right now. I am ruling in making sure I help Jim and his team," he said.

However, Mandel added that it would be easier for him to serve in a Tory government if Prentice ends up winning the leadership this fall.

Education minister lauds Alberta curriculum changes

Rollout to take years.

Jeff Johnson says schools will be changed for the better, with focus on literacy and numeracy

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Efforts to roll out a new curriculum in Alberta schools may not be completed until 2020, but the education minister downplayed any talk of dramatic change to the inner workings of classrooms Tuesday.

"We're taking a really good curriculum and we're just making it better," Jeff Johnson said.

He said the three primary goals of the changes will be to re-emphasize literacy and numeracy, be more deliberate in teaching "soft skills" — problem-solving, communicating and so on — and to try to tackle a common complaint among teachers that the current curriculum is "too packed."

Alberta Education Minister Jeff Johnson METRO FILE

Johnson's comments in an interview with Metro follow remarks of a similar nature from his deputy minister, Greg Bass, at a gathering of school board representatives on Tuesday.

Those in attendance also heard that, come next year, half of all high schools in the province will be involved in a comprehensive redesign for senior students.

Among the items that could change for learners are the times that school starts and ends, better online course offerings and the addition of specialized schools focused on career and technology studies.

Frustration, criticism

Changes to the curriculum have been a common bone of contention among certain parents, education watchers and opposition political parties. Some have openly questioned whether pricey specialized high-school courses are the best option for school boards constantly complaining about funds. As well, changes to an "outcome-based" report card at the CBE have also been met with frustration and criticism from parents and online petitions have circulated protesting changes to the math curriculum.

The Calgary Board of Education, for example, has already laid the groundwork for a slate of high schools ranging in expertise on everything from the culinary arts and cosmetology to aviation and engineering.

'Nordic model' finds widespread support

Prostitution. Officials map out benefits of a system that does not prosecute sellers of sex

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Alberta's solicitor general says he's been inundated with signatures advocating a prostitution approach that prosecutes only the buyers of sex, not the sellers.

The so-called "Nordic model" is used in countries such as Sweden and Norway, and there have been hints Canada could move in that direction after federal laws were shot down in a Supreme Court decision in December.

Ultimately, Alberta will be required to comply with federal direction. However, Alberta Solicitor General Jonathan Denis is firmly against charging prostitutes and has been gathering signatures from community members.

As of Monday, he'd received support from 3,000.

"There are pages and pages (of signatures)," Denis said. "There are very strong compassionate grounds here."

Denis plans to present the petition in the Alberta legislature this fall and then share it with federal Justice Minister Peter MacKay, whom he's been in close contact with.

Advocates say the Nordic approach fosters an environment in which sex-trade workers can complain to police without fear.

On Wednesday, a city committee will review a report on the state of prostitution in Calgary as well as the findings of two Calgary police officers and a bylaw official who ventured to Sweden, Norway and Denmark to watch the Nordic model in action.

Debi Perry, manager of the police strategic services division, went along for the trip. She said Tuesday that while the federal government will dictate terms on prostitution laws, the implementation will be "very local."

She noted that in Stockholm, social agencies even offer support for johns.

In action

City officials have estimated there are between 1,000 to 3,000 prostitutes working in Calgary at any given time.

Perry said the Nordic model contains all three of the components needed to abolish prostitution — social policy, legislation and support programs.

"If your community is supporting that whole idea that treating people as a commodity is wrong, I think it's a very good starting point," she said.

Second and third suspects charged in connection to alleged prostitution ring

Calgary police have charged three people in connection with human trafficking and prostitution.

The charges stem from initial claims made by a 37-year-old that she was physically and sexually assaulted while working in the sex trade.

The woman claimed a man acting as her pimp forced her to have sex with him and his clients between August and October of last year.

Daniel Erhabor, 26, was originally charged in March. But police said Tuesday they've now linked two others, 30-year-old Ricardo Joseph and 25-year-old Cynthia Kindoko, to the prostitution ring.

Police acting Staff Sgt. Mike Saunders said it's believed the victim was physically harmed and threatened.

Erhabor has been released on bail and is due back in court June 13.

Joseph and Kindoko remain in custody and are scheduled to appear in court June 17. JEREMY NOLAÏS/METRO

Thais adopt salute from Hunger Games

Act of rebellion. Protesters flashing three raised fingers could face arrest, military warns

The three-finger salute from the Hollywood movie the Hunger Games is being used as a real symbol of resistance in Thailand. Protesters against the military coup are flashing the gesture as a silent act of rebellion, and they're being threatened with arrest if they ignore warnings to stop.

Thailand's military rulers said Tuesday they were monitoring the new form of opposition to the coup.

"Raising three fingers has become a symbol in calling for fundamental political rights," said anti-coup activist Sombat Boonngam-anong on his Facebook page.

He called on people to raise "3 fingers, 3 times a day" — at 9 a.m., 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. — in safe public places where no police or military are present.

The gesture emerged over the weekend as protesters joined small flash mobs, or stood alone, flashing three fingers in the air.

"We know it comes from the movie, and let's say it represents resistance against the authorities," Col. Weerachon Sukhondhapatipak, a spokesman for the junta, told The Associated Press.

"If a single individual raises three fingers in the air, we are not going to arrest him or her," he said.

"But if it is a political gathering of five people or more, then we will have to take some action. If it persists, then we will have to make an arrest," he said.

In the Hunger Games movie series and book trilogy, the salute symbolizes rebellion against totalitarian rule, signifying thanks, admiration and goodbye to a loved one.

Court fails to see humour in prank

A Dutch court has convicted three men of threatening behaviour after one dressed up as a clown and chased cyclists with an axe.

The other two filmed the prank and posted it on YouTube, according to a description of the April 24 event that prosecutors released Tuesday.

The three men, who were not identified by court officials, defended their actions as humorous. All were sentenced to 40 hours' community service. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ban removed

Turks can watch YouTube again

Turkish authorities say they have restored access to YouTube five days after the country's highest court ruled that the two-month ban on the video-sharing website violates freedom of expression.

The restrictions on YouTube were imposed after the leak of an audio recording of a government meeting in which officials appeared to be discussing a possible military intervention in Syria. Turkey also blocked access to Twitter in March. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GMO baby. 3-parent IVF appears not 'unsafe': Regulator

Britain's fertility regulator says controversial techniques to create embryos from the DNA of three people "do not appear to be unsafe" even though no one has ever received the treatment, according to a new report released Tuesday.

The report based its conclusion largely on lab tests and some animal experiments.

The techniques are meant to stop mothers from passing on potentially fatal genetic diseases to their babies and involve altering a human egg or embryo before transferring it into a woman.

Marcy Darnovsky, of the Center for Genetics and Society in the U.S., warned that allowing the method might lead to a slippery slope and tempt scientists and parents to use the techniques to create designer babies with certain traits.

Earlier this year, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration held a meeting to discuss the techniques and scientists warned it could take decades to determine if they are safe.

Survivors recall the Tiananmen Square massacre

After 25 years. As China still tries to cover up the massacre, those who lived tell their tales of June 4, 1989, in Beijing

Quoted

"We should not forget June 4. Those who don't learn from history are condemned to repeat it."

Cheuk Kwan, of the Toronto Association for Democracy in China

Currently

Like it never happened

China allows no public discussion of the events of June 3-4, 1989, when soldiers accompanied by tanks and armoured personnel carriers fought their way into the heart of the city, killing hundreds of unarmed protesters and onlookers.

The government has never issued a complete, formal accounting of the crackdown and the number of casualties.

Beijing's official line is that the student-led protests aimed to topple the ruling Communist Party and plunge China into chaos. Protest leaders said they were just seeking greater democracy and freedom, and an end to corruption and favouritism within the party.

Authorities regularly tighten security ahead of June 4, but this year's suppression is notably harsher than in the past. Activists who received no more than a warning have been taken into custody.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Liane Lee remembers holding back a screaming 12-year-old boy in Tiananmen Square.

"They killed my brother. They killed my brother!" she recalls him yelling to the soldiers who had been firing at the pro-democracy protesters. It was the early hours of June 4, 1989 — a day that Lee still struggles talking about 25 years later. But she recounted the bloody military massacre to an audience at the University of Ottawa on Tuesday.

Then a 26-year-old university student from Hong Kong, Lee held the boy back until he finally wriggled away. She says she still remembers the smell of his sweat and the warmth of his tears. Witnesses say the boy's body was later carried to the first aid station, covered in blood, but Lee does not remember that. She figures she blocked it from her memory.

Now 55 and living in Cleveland, Ohio, Lee says many Chinese people have accused her of lying about the massacre that killed a still-unknown number of the country's students, teachers and workers.

"I want to remember their names, but I can only remember their noble faces," said Lee, who urged the audience to reflect on the massacre that the Chinese government is still trying to cover up today. Many scholars, artists and lawyers who have tried to commemorate the event on this milestone have wound up under house arrest or in jail.

Chen Yuguo was a teacher at Beijing University who had been camping out at the square in the days leading up to the massacre. He was in one of the last groups that left at about 5 a.m. on June 4, after seeing many people crushed by tanks and a colleague "badly, almost fatally stabbed."

Do you know why a mortgage document is so big?

It's because there's a lot more in it than just the rate.

Why lowest isn't always best.

Don't get us wrong. A low rate is great. But most low rate mortgages come with restrictive terms that could keep you in your mortgage longer than you'd like. Which means paying interest longer than you'd like. So, instead of thinking about the cost of your mortgage in rate terms, think about it in dollar terms. For example, how much interest will you pay over the life of your mortgage?

How restrictive terms cost you in the end.

The key to saving interest costs is having the flexibility to increase payments or make extra payments. With rates as low as they are, regular lump sum and increased payments will save you more interest over the life of your mortgage. Even more than switching to bi-weekly payments!†

Good advice is worth its weight in gold.

Locking in at today's low rates might be right for you. But keep in mind that small changes can make a big difference in helping you become mortgage-free faster so keeping that flexibility is essential.

So how can we offer a rate this low with the benefits you want?

Since we refuse to overload our mortgages with restrictions and we insist on giving people competitively low rates, the only way we can do it is for a limited time.

As of May 22nd, 2014, if there are no 'cost of borrowing' charges (for example, appraisal fees), the APR for the rate of 2.97% equals 2.95% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance). Where a typical appraisal fee of $300 is assumed (actual appraisal fees may vary), the APR equals 3.02% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance), for a term of 5 years – assuming a mortgage of $100,000 with a 25-year amortization. Scotia Flex Value® Mortgage Special – Scotiabank Prime as of September 9, 2010 was 3.00%. As of May 22nd, 2014, the Scotia Flex Value® Mortgage – Closed 5 Year Term was 2.47%. If there are no 'cost of borrowing' charges (for example, appraisal fees), the APR for the rate of 2.47% equals 2.46% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance). Where a typical appraisal fee of $300 is assumed (actual appraisal fees may vary), the APR equals 2.52% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance), for a term of 5 years – assuming a mortgage of $100,000 with a 25-year amortization. The Scotia Flex Value® Mortgage interest rate varies with Scotiabank Prime. These offers expire June 7th, 2014 but are subject to change or withdrawal at any time. The mortgage must be funded within 90 days of the application date. Other conditions may apply.

† Assuming a mortgage of $270,000 with a 25-year amortization at a rate of 2.97%, switching to bi-weekly payments will decrease your amortization to less than 23 years and save you approximately $14,130 in interest. Alternatively, assuming the same mortgage of $270,000 with a 25-year amortization at a rate of 2.97%, if you keep your monthly payment frequency but apply annual lump sum prepayments of $500 and increase your regular payments by just $20 every year, after your first year, you will decrease your amortization to less than 21 years and save approximately $18,923 in interest.

2 deaths. Highway crash broke family apart in an instant, survivor testifies

A young driver's decision to stop her car on a highway to help shoo along ducks dramatically changed the lives of an entire Quebec family, a jury trial in Montreal heard Tuesday.

Emma Czornobaj has pleaded not guilty to two counts each of criminal negligence causing death and dangerous driving causing the deaths of Andre Roy, 50, and his 16-year-old daughter, Jessie. They are survived by Pauline Volikakis, Andre Roy's wife of 20 years, and Jessie's mother.

It should have been a quick 20-minute motorcycle ride home for Volikakis and her family to cap off a glorious summer day in 2010. She and her husband were both driving motorcycles; their daughter was with Roy on his bike. Volikakis fought back tears as she described how the lives of her husband and their only child ended so suddenly.

Court heard the car was stopped with the engine running and without emergency lights, on Highway 30, south of Montreal.

Girl in stabbing case may be mentally ill: Lawyer

Slenderman. Two girls have been charged with first-degree attempted homicide in a stabbing allegedly aimed at pleasing a fictional Internet character

A 12-year-old girl accused of plotting to kill a friend to curry favour with a fictional Internet character shows signs of mental illness and should be in a hospital, her defence attorney said Tuesday.

The girl and another 12-year-old have been charged as adults with first-degree attempted homicide in a stabbing that nearly killed another child the same age.

The two girls reportedly said to investigators that they had plotted for months to kill their friend because a character called Slenderman required them to kill someone before they could become his "proxy."

Both girls are being held at a juvenile detention centre. Anthony Cotton, the attorney for one girl, said a judge rejected his request Monday to have the girl transferred to a mental health facility, but he will renew that request when she returns to court next week.

"From what I know, we've got a young girl here who has no previous criminal record at all and, if the record is accurate, probably suffers from very serious mental health issues," said Cotton.

Cotton said the girl's parents are trying to figure out whether there were any signs they may have missed.

The girls told investigators they read about Slenderman on the horror website creepy-pasta.wikia.com. It's not clear whether they got access to the site at home or at school.

Both were charged Monday in Waukesha County Circuit Court; they each face up to 65 years in prison if convicted. A court commissioner set bail at $500,000 cash per child.

Sex trade policy failing: Study

Advocates for sex workers in B.C. are calling on the federal government to reconsider incoming prostitution laws after finding women in the sex trade in Vancouver are no safer under the proposed policing style.

A study published in a global journal Tuesday found even when Vancouver police limited arrests to their clients and pimps, sex workers in the city endured the same rates of physical and sexual violence.

The research comes within days of the Conservative government's plans to table legislation setting out a Made-in-Canada approach to dealing with the sale of sex. Authors of the study, published in the British Medical Journal Open, say policy-makers aren't willing to look at scientific evidence, are not listening to sex workers on safety, and will repeat mistakes of the past.

Hudson's Bay Company.

The Canadian retailer reported first-quarter net earnings of $176 million

The Hudson's Bay Company hopes a trend toward luxury goods will continue to boost its bottom line after swinging to a first-quarter profit on strong sales from Saks Fifth Avenue.

"We've been seeing a very strong, positive trend in luxury items — the more unique, the more expensive, the more special a product is, the greater the demand we seem to be getting, so that bodes well for Saks," HBC governor and CEO Richard Baker said during a conference call Tuesday to discuss first-quarter results.

HBC is on track to bring two Saks locations to Canada by the spring of 2016, he added, since the com-

LIKE TIPPING, BUT WITHOUT THE TIP

It may cost more, especially when you add in the ferry ride to Vancouver Island, but we'll have to start having lunch at Smoke 'N Water, the new restaurant at the Pacific Shores Resort in Parksville.

Not only does the food look simple and good, Smoke 'N Water has a spectacular 6,000-gallon fish tank/aquarium.

Oh, and it's the first no-tipping restaurant in Canada.

Smoke 'N Water opened yesterday, and although I've been vigilantly scanning the Vancouver Island news, there are no reports of server riots or customer fainting spells. But it's still early...

As you may remember, I've written about tipping before, almost exactly a year ago, when a number of U.S. restaurants introduced a no-tipping policy. But this is Canada, land of peace, order and everything should stay the same.

Food industry experts are calling owner David Jones naive

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan

for his view that "tipping is a broken business model" but anyone who ever tries to do anything is naive. Until it succeeds.

Jones is going to actually pay his servers a living wage — between $20 and $24 an hour. Notoriously underpaid and overworked cooks will get $16 to $18. He'll even pay medical and dental, which is rare in Restaurantland.

Here's the hitch — prices will be about 18 per cent higher than the average. Jones is betting you'll pay roughly the same as you would if you left a tip just so you don't have to leave a tip.

So let's do the math. At $24 an hour, that's $192 for an eight-hour shift. If you're earning servers' minimum wage, which in B.C. is $9 an hour, you make a base of $72. You have to make up the rest on tips. Granted, servers can make well over $100 a day on tips, but they have to do a lot of stupid server tricks to make sure they get one — pretend to love everything on the menu, put little smiley faces on the bill, hover anxiously and expectantly

Naive like a fox

Jones is betting you'll pay roughly the same as you would if you left a tip just so you don't have to leave a tip.

while the customer figures out the 15 or 20 per cent.

This way, you get paid and retain your dignity. Crazy. It's too early to tell if this will set a trend or if Smoke 'N Water will turn into so much smoke-'n-water damage. But what's not to like? If you're a customer, you can walk into a restaurant expecting good service to be part of the, um, service, not requiring an extra bribe. If you're a server, you're a member of a fairly paid team that works together to provide a superior dining experience. Like a grown-up.

And if you're David Jones, columnists across the continent write about your new restaurant the day after it opens.

Naive, eh?

Replica of van Gogh's ear grown from relative's DNA

A German museum has put on display a copy of Vincent van Gogh's ear that was grown using some of the Dutch artist's genetic material.

The Center for Art and Media in Karlsruhe says the ear consists of living cells grown from samples provided by the great-great-grandson of van Gogh's brother. The museum says the genes are about 1/16th identical.

Ear-y legend

He's known as the tortured genius who cut off his own ear, but two German historians claim that van Gogh lost his ear in a fight with his friend and fellow artist Paul Gauguin, with whom he was hopelessly infatuated.

- The official version usually goes that the disturbed Dutch painter severed his left ear lobe with a razor blade in a fit of lunacy one evening shortly before Christmas 1888. Bleeding heavily, van Gogh then wrapped it in cloth, walked to a nearby bordello and presented the severed ear to a prostitute.
- A book argues that van Gogh may have made up the story to protect Gauguin, a keen fencer, who actually lopped it off with a sword during a heated argument.

Stone taking on Snowden

Oliver Stone will write and direct a film about Edward Snowden, one of two high-profile films in the works about the National Security Agency leaker. Stone announced Monday that he plans to adapt The Snowden Files: The Inside Story of the World's Most Wanted Man, a book by Guardian journalist Luke Harding. The project pairs one of cinema's most controversial directors with one of the most explosive news events in recent years — one that is ongoing.

"This is one of the greatest stories of our time," Stone said in a statement. He added that making such a film is "a real challenge."

He will have some deep-pocketed competition. Sony Pictures last month purchased the big-screen rights to Glenn Greenwald's No Place to Hide: Edward Snowden, the NSA and the U.S. Surveillance State. The film is being produced by James Bond producers Barbara Broccoli and Michael G. Wilson. Stone has advocated for the former NSA contract systems analyst, who is living in Russia on a temporary grant of asylum after leaking massive amounts of NSA documents to the media.

"To me, Snowden is a hero because he revealed secrets that we should all know, that the United States has repeatedly violated the Fourth Amendment," Stone said in a press conference at the Karlovy Vary Film Festival in the Czech Republic.

Live. Die. Repeat.

Tomorrow, today, yesterday. Latest Tom Cruise flick sees its own shadow in a recurring theme on the big screen

FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

"How many times have we been here," asks Rita (Emily Blunt). "For me, it's been an eternity," replies William (Cruise) as he relives the same day of an alien invasion over and over.

Edge of Tomorrow is a time-loop movie that can best be described as War of the Worlds meets Groundhog Day.

In Groundhog Day, Bill Murray says, "Every morning I wake up without a scratch on me, not a dent in the fender. I am an immortal." His take on a drunk, suicide-prone weatherman who discovers the beauty of life by living the same day endlessly may be the granddaddy of all Hollywood déjà vu stories, but many other movie characters have been caught in cinematic time circles.

The DVD cover for 2006's Salvage asks the question, "What if every day you relived your own murder?" Originally called Gruesome for the festival circuit, the movie is as grim as Bill Murray's film is life-affirming. Called a "digital video hell" — spawn of Psycho, Eyes Without a Face and Groundhog Day, by Variety, Salvage is the story of Claire (Lauren Currie Lewis), a convenience store worker who undergoes her murder

Déjà vu for Tom Cruise and Emily Blunt as she explains why wearing all of that gear must feel like an eternity in their new action/sci fi movie, Edge of Tomorrow. CONTRIBUTED over and over. Despite its extremely low budget — star Lewis doubled as the film's make-up artist — Salvage was an official selection of the 2006 Sundance Festival.

The horror genre lends itself to time-bending tales. Camp Slaughter is a 2005 throwback to the slasher films of the 1980s. In this one, a group of modern teens stumble across Camp Hiawatha, a dangerous place where not-so-happy-campers are trapped in 1981 and forced to re-experience the night a maniacal murderer went on a killing spree. Labelled "Groundhog Day meets Friday the 13th (part 2,3,4,5,6,7,8... every one of them!)," by one critic, it's gory good fun.

Not into gory? The Yuletide provides a less bloody backdrop for time-looping. The title Christmas Every Day is self-explanatory but 12 Dates of Christmas is better than the name suggests. Us Weekly called this Amy Smart romantic comedy about a woman stuck in an endless Christmas Eve, a sweet "nicely woven journey."

Finally, the aptly named Repeaters is a Canadian film written by Arne Olsen, scribe of Power Rangers: The Movie.

Repeaters is about a trio of recovering addicts who find themselves in "an impossible time labyrinth" after being electrocuted in a storm. Like most time-bending films, Repeaters is about learning from your mistakes.

What sets it apart from some of the others are three unlikeable leads who use their situation to raise hell and break the law.

It's only when Kyle (Dustin Milligan) realizes they could be in big trouble if time suddenly unfreezes for them that familiar time-loop themes of redemption and self-reflection arise.

Among those precautions? Lopez reportedly had current boyfriend and choreographer Casper Smart sign a legal document forbidding him

Hill backtracks after hurling homophobic slur at pap

MELINDA TAUB

Metro World News

This could just as easily be titled "Paparazzo successfully baits Jonah Hill into losing his cool by insulting his shorts."

On Monday, a photographer pestering the comedy star caught him on tape using a homophobic slur (TMZ has the video). Hill, who was walking with friends in L.A., did his best to ignore the paparazzo, who was dancing around and shouting questions. "I like the shorts, though, bro. They're pretty sexy," the photographer said at one point, apparently a swipe at Hill's flowery summer shorts. Hill eventually lost his cool and yelled, "Suck my d—, you f—," at the photographer.

On Tuesday, Hill, who's been known as a strong supporter of the LGBT community, went on The Howard Stern Show to offer his sincere apology for using the slur. "In that moment, I said a disgusting word that does not at all reflect how I feel about any group of people. I grew up with gay family members. I'm leaving here to go spend the day with one of my closest co-workers and best friend, who is gay, who's getting married, who I'm going to stand (with) at his wedding," Hill told Stern.

Red-carpet prankster was trying to 'bury his face in my crotch,' Brad says

Brad Pitt is finally breaking his silence about his red carpet run-in with Ukrainian prankster Vitalii Sediuk at the Maleficent premiere last week.

"I was at the end of the line signing autographs, when out of the corner of my eye I saw someone stage-diving over the barrier at me," he tells People magazine in a statement.

"I took a step back. This guy had latched onto my lapels. I looked down and the nutter was trying to bury his face in my crotch, so I cracked him twice in the back of the head — not too hard, but enough to get his attention because he did let go. I think he was then just grabbing for a handhold because the guys were on him, and he reached up and caught my glasses."

The crotch-targeting is in line with Sediuk's style of prank, as he'd been caught sticking his head under America Ferrera's dress last month on a Cannes red carpet.

The disgraced TV reporter was sentenced to three years' probation, a year of counselling and a temporary restraining order keeping him away from Pitt and Angelina Jolie.

"I don't mind an exhibitionist," Pitt insists. "But if this guy keeps it up, he's going to spoil it for the fans who have waited up all night for an autograph or a selfie, because it will make people more wary to approach a crowd. And he should know if he tries to look up a woman's dress again, he's going to get stomped."

Hoping to plan the ultimate mancation this summer but feel the Vegas Bachelor Party is overplayed? You'll find the perfect alternative at Travaasa Austin Experiential Resort, located in breezy Texas Hill Country.

Nestled against 210 acres of the Balcones Canyonlands Preserve, the resort offers a perfect playground for macho men who have a penchant for pampering.

Meals are served at Jean's Kitchen under the watchful eye of chef Benjamin Baker, who creates new menus each day to reflect the changing harvest.

His kitchen showcases produce from the resort's working organic farm, as well as locally sourced meat, fish and dairy to create flavourful, healthful meals with a Texas fusion flair.

Those who enjoy a splash in their glass will appreciate the top-notch sipping tequila, small batch bourbon and local Texas craft brews on offer at the bar.

The resort includes riding stables, a high ropes challenge course designed in partnership with Outward Bound, fitness centre, pump track, yoga studio, infinity-edge pool, dining room which spills onto a pretty

Guests are encouraged to make the most of their vacation; relax by the pool and stretch out at morning yoga or dive right into the adrenaline rush via bike pump track and giant swing.

Those looking for an active adventure will find a dizzying number of activities to choose from. Start by holding your breath while walking the tight rope at the Prickly Pear Challenge Course before soaring through the treetops on a 250-foot-long zip line. Cyclists will find their own slice of nirvana while whizzing through a 100-square-foot Pump Track specializing in jump biking.

And no trip to Texas is complete unless you've saddled up, so be sure to stop by the equine centre with your cowboy boots. Hop on a friendly quarter horse for a guided trail ride, which includes a splash in a quiet creek and zig-zag adventure up a hillside dotted with oak and mountain juniper.

Finish the trip by treating yourself at Travaasa's award-winning wellness spa. Male guests indulge in treatments in the Western Sky Room, lined with reclaimed Douglas fir planks from an old Texas elementary school and Loblolly pine from a local library.

The ceiling is etched with a fibre-optic recreation of the Texas night sky, a deer bust hangs overhead and a raw-hide chair offers a welcome spot to relax both before and after your treatment.

Flanders Fields tour not one to forget

Belgium. 100 years on, the gravity of the Great War comes to life while wandering through Ypres

Crimson poppies still dance in the breeze as if nothing horrific happened in Flanders Fields of Ypres. But a century after the start of the First World War, the flowers endure as a symbol of the dead, in part because of a celebrated poem:

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow — Between the crosses, row on row."

The famous flowers are among many reminders of the region's connection to the Great War. Amid monuments and headstones in this western corner of Belgium, Flanders' eerie landscapes, trenches and bunkers continue to evoke the soldiers who died here by the hundreds of thousands. As care-free 21st century travel goes, a tour of Flanders Fields packs a punch that can long stay with you.

The haunting poem, In Flanders Fields, was written by Lt. Col. John McCrae, a doctor from Guelph, Ont., who ran a field hospital during the war. During a recent wreath-laying ceremony at the massive Tyne Cot burial grounds to honour the dead, the poem was read aloud by a student visiting with a group from St. George's Academy in Sleaford, England.

"The kids are really moved by it," said teacher Charlotte Tilley. "We had about half a dozen crying."

One stunning aspect of a visit here is the region's beauty and serenity. A spectacular springtime has turned the once barren, muddy battlegrounds lush with ripening wheat fields and pastures where cattle chew thick grass.

Walk through Ypres, which has four battles named for it, and you'd be forgiven for thinking you're in a splendidly preserved medieval town with a Gothic hall, gabled houses and spires. But what was left of the town on Nov. 11, 1918 — when the war ended — were stumps, rubble and vague memories where homes once stood. Ypres' second battle saw the first use of chemical weapons in warfare, and its third, named for the tiny village of Passchendaele, saw 150,000 men die in 100 days.

Some wanted Ypres to stay in ruins as remembrance. The people immediately decided otherwise and started rebuilding, "as if there never had been a war. It was very much a psychological reaction," said Piet Chielens, the co-ordinator of the In Flanders Fields museum, which is housed in the rebuilt neo-Gothic hall on the marketplace.

"Ypres immediately became a centre of remembrance. The first tourists and pilgrims arrived in early spring of 1919," said Chielens.

Massive crowds are expected this year. "We believe there will be something like half a million visitors this year coming from at least 70 different nations," Chielens said.

Even ahead of the official start of the centenary in August, hundreds, sometimes a few thousand, flock to the 8 p.m. playing of the Last Post, the daily salute at Ypres' Menin Gate, where walls list 54,000 soldiers who perished but were never found.

The deafening silence once the bugle stops playing is a must in remembrance tourism, as is the In Flanders Fields Museum. But visitors should also take time away from the ceremonies and crowds to wander across the flat fields dotted with low-flung ridges where so many fought and died.

"The real museum is still out there," said Chielens. "The traces, the scars in the landscape, the numerous monuments and cemeteries that will give you that sense of loss and tragedy."

It might be a tiny cemetery where only dozens of soldiers lie, a rain-sodden trench, or a derelict German bunker.

The city of Diksmuide has the Ijzertoren memorial with sweeping views of battlefields from atop its 84-metre (275-foot) tower. Nearby, the warren of Dodengang trenches brings the claustrophobia of war home, even if it no longer has the rats, stench and enemy within shouting distance.

Yet tourists should not limit their trip to pondering war. "You learn to understand what the importance of living and enjoying life is after you have been confronted with the experience," Chielens said.

Red poppies were first symbolized as a means of remembrance by Canadian First World War soldier and surgeon Lt. Col. John McCrae.

Tyne Cot is the largest Commonwealth war cemetery in the world in terms of burials, with 11,956 Commonwealth servicemen of the First World War buried there.

For kids, that might mean a visit to the Bellewaerde theme park. For grown-ups, gastronomy stands out. Those with money and sense to reserve ahead should try In De Wulf, considered one of the world's best restaurants, in the village of Dranouter, close to the Kemmel Ridge battle site. You might spot a chef picking flowers in the fields that will turn up on your dinner plate, or you might be served, as a vegetable, shoots from hop plants used in brewing the region's famous beer.

For tourists, there's nothing like a summer's evening with a Hommelbier or St. Bernardus Tripel on a terrace to let the day sink in. And while the memory of those fluttering poppies may fade, the sense of what happened here will likely grow stronger. As McCrae wrote:

"If ye break faith with us who die — We shall not sleep, though poppies grow — In Flanders fields."

COURTESY TEXAS GENERAL LAND OFFICE

Remember the Alamo

From the very day General Antonio López de Santa Anna and his army arrived outside San Antonio, Texas (Feb. 23, 1836), people have been talking about the ensuing battle, the people involved and the myths that sprang from this legendary part of American history. The state's top tourist attraction, the Alamo sees more than 2.5 million visitors every year at the 4.2-acre site. For 13 days, the Texan and Tejano defenders stood their ground, getting help from outside volunteers in this tug-of-war over Texas. Among the able bodies were knife fighter Jim Bowie of Bowie knife fame, and former Tennessee congressman David Crockett. The museum does a nice job of making your visit interesting. DOUG WALLACE/METRO

Cruise your way through culture shock caused by any new cubicle

It's a new job, it's a new day, and you're feeling good. Don't be daunted by the difference in atmosphere from one office to the next

MICHELLE SAMMUT
TalentEgg.ca

If you're ready to make a career move, transitioning from one office to another can be a challenge. You've done your homework on Company X and have the skill set to succeed in your new role, but the everyday details of your new environment are a mystery. Organizational culture is the overall system of beliefs, behaviours, customs and dynamics that make up the identity of a workplace.

There are as many different types of culture as there are companies, so how do you prepare yourself for success if your past and present work cultures are like night and day?

Here are seven useful tips to

Are the people around you sharing stories about their weekend or are they talking about work? The level of personal interaction at a workplace can reflect whether a culture values building community or growing the bottom line. iStock ensure a smooth transition and help you overcome any office culture shock.

Before you get there

1. Establish a cultural checklist. Make a list of the qualities you liked and disliked about your last workplace to figure out which cultural qualities you need at the office in order to thrive (like an open-door policy with management) and those you can live without (lunchtime yoga classes). Developing your sense of self-awareness can help to inform your future career strategy.

2. Identify what Company X's online presence is like. Are they active on social media? Do they have a blog? Does their website feature staff photos or personal bios? If an online culture is fun and interactive it may reflect a youthful culture offline. If their online presence is more formal, offline culture could be by the book.

3. Ask strategic questions during an interview to get an idea of how your cultural checklist might fit with theirs. Targeted questions that touch on issues like work/life balance can offer you a glimpse of their cultural expectations and help you determine whether you can get behind them. Potential questions include: "What does the busiest time of year look like?" and "Which teams will I be interacting with?"

Once you arrive

4. Embark on a "culture walk" around the office and look for artifacts that implicitly tell a company story. Family photos on desks, accomplishments on office walls, memos on bulletin boards and the arrangement of furniture can all provide insights. Market-driven cultures typically have financial goals and targets displayed in plain view on whiteboards. Highly collaborative cultures might have open-concept work areas where desks are arranged into clusters.

5. Listen to the conversations happening around the office. You can discern culture by the way work is communicated. Are projects assigned primarily through email or is your manager more likely to stop by your desk to chat about it in person?

6. Find a mentor who can help you navigate office norms and habits. Invite them out for coffee as a way to get to know them better and learn more about their time with Company X.

7. Ask around about social initiatives and activities at the organization, such as volunteer programs or organized sports leagues. Establishing personal connections can sometimes be a challenge at larger organizations, so getting involved outside of the office can help you build social capital. The initiatives a company is involved with can also be a great indication of their cultural values.

Remember, adjusting to a new role always takes some time. Be patient with the process and be proud of yourself for moving on to

Check out these five tips before posting on the key site for showing off your skills

SHAHEERAH KAYANI

You may have set up a LinkedIn account, filled out a few basic fields and given up on completing it. That's a bad idea. When it comes to your online presence, having an incomplete LinkedIn profile suggests that you don't care about sharing your professional details (or even worse — that you don't have anything worth sharing). Here are tips to help you get started.

Nail the LinkedIn basics

You should never leave the Summary section blank. Use your LinkedIn summary to:

- Introduce yourself and summarize your work history and notable accomplishments.
- Highlight your core special-

Grab a reader's attention

Don't write up something that is generic and boring. Focus on telling a good story that highlights your skills and experience, while also communicating your personal character — it's a lot like writing a cover letter.

- For example: "Upon graduating with a degree in veterinary medicine, I was ready to start putting my passion for animals to work. I was hired on as a veterinary nurse with a local practice and have flourished in my role ever since."

ties and your areas of interest.

- Specify the industry, field or type of role you are looking for to help recruiters find the right match for you.

Use up the whole word limit

Try your best to use the character limit that LinkedIn allows.

Making good use of all 2,000 characters will ensure that you are getting the full benefits of essential keyword optimization. Fill your summary with keywords that the next recruiter or hiring manager will be searching for to make sure they notice you. For example: Sales, business development, account management and strategic partnerships are all good keywords for someone pursuing a career in sales.

Break it up

Any number of your LinkedIn visitors may have no idea who you are. That's why it's important to have a profile layout that encourages people to read and engage with you. Make your summary more visually appealing and easier to read by:

- Maximizing the value of every word. Cut what you don't need.
- Using headers and sub-headers.
- Carefully organizing your line-breaks and blocks of text so they are reader-friendly.

Kevin Glenn says he was taken by surprise when the Ottawa Redblacks signed Henry Burris to be the No. 1 QB ahead of him. JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Redblacks' new lead QB suddenly a Lion

Caught off-guard. Glenn traded to B.C. Lions after draft pick to new Ottawa franchise

Kevin Glenn was all set to be the Ottawa Redblacks' first starting quarterback.

The team selected him first overall in the expansion draft to stock the CFL's ninth franchise, and following years of uncertainty he was preparing to once again be an undisputed No. 1 pivot.

Then almost overnight, circumstances changed dramatically.

The Hamilton Tiger-Cats released veteran quarterback Henry Burris — who led them to last year's Grey Cup — at the end of January after signing Zach Collaros to be their new starter, creating an opportunity the Redblacks felt they couldn't pass up.

Ottawa signed Burris to a three-year contract a few days later to be the face of the franchise — a move that Glenn met with a trade demand, one that was finally granted last month at the draft when the Redblacks dealt him to the B.C.

Lions.

Now at training camp with his new team and happy to be wanted, there's still a tinge of bitterness in Glenn's voice when talk turns to the way things played out in the nation's capital.

"Everybody knows the situation in Ottawa," the 34-year-old said this week. "I was kind of blindsided into what was going on because, not getting into everything... They knew that I wanted to be 'the guy' in order to be in Ottawa."

He said the Redblacks didn't notify him they intended to sign Burris, simply adding: "I got it in the news the same day that it actually happened."

He points to a roster filled with players who won a championship three years ago as why he was willing to be the No. 2 quarterback behind Travis Lulay in B.C., something he wasn't able to accept with the Redblacks.

"This is not any knock towards the Ottawa franchise or the league or the fans in Ottawa or anything," said Glenn. "You're dealing with an expansion team versus a team (with) a lot of guys who actually won the Grey Cup in 2011."

CFL Rookie sanctioned for steroid use

Defensive lineman Quinn Smith received a two-year sanction by the Canadian Centre for Ethics in Sport on Tuesday for an anti-doping rule violation.

The athlete's urine sample revealed the presence of the prohibited anabolic agent Stanozolol.

The Concordia player released a statement last month accepting full responsibility for the positive test. He said he inadvertently ingested the steroid via a supplement.

Smith was selected by the Calgary Stampeders with the seventh overall pick in last month's CFL draft. The positive test won't hamper his ability to play in the CFL as a rookie. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Looming strike

CFL rejects players' latest offer

The CFL is one step closer to a work stoppage after the league rejected the union's most recent offer, the president of the CFL Players' Association said Tuesday.

"I think we are," Scott Flory said in a phone interview. "I think it's safe to say we are."

The players tabled a new offer on Monday that called for a shorter term and included concessions on the salary cap and the amount of revenue that would trigger the renegotiation of the deal.

The two sides haven't met face-to-face since Thursday and no new talks are scheduled.

Eugenie Bouchard celebrates winning her French Open quarter-final match against Carla Suarez Navarro in Paris on Tuesday. DARKO VOJINOVIC/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bouncing back into a Grand Slam semi

French Open. Bouchard sets up match against 2012 champ Sharapova; Raonic falls to Djokovic in quarter-finals Eugenie Bouchard is preparing for her second straight Grand Slam semifinal. Fellow Canadian Milos Raonic is still looking to reach his first.

Bouchard defeated Spain's Carla Suarez Navarro 7-6 (4), 2-6, 7-5 at the French Open on Tuesday. The match was completed a couple hours before Raonic came up short in his bid to reach the men's final four, dropping a 7-5, 7-6 (5), 6-4 decision to Novak Djokovic of Serbia.

Next up for Bouchard, a 20-year-old from Westmount, Que., is a meeting with Maria Sharapova. The 2012 champion from Russia advanced with a 1-6, 7-5, 6-1 over Garbine Muguruza of Spain.

"I'm very content with a win like this," said Bouchard. "It was a battle throughout. She played very well, especially on long points."

"The last set was key for me. I'm really excited to be playing Sharapova in a big match here."

Bouchard was the third

Canadian woman to reach the Roland Garros quarter-finals after Carling Bassett-Seguso (1984, 1986) and Helen Kelesi (1988, 1989). Bouchard and Bassett-Seguso are the only players to reach the semifinals at a Grand Slam, the latter doing so at the 1984 US Open.

Earlier this year, Bouchard reached the Australian Open semifinals but lost to eventual champion Li Na of China.

As for Raonic, the No. 8 seed from Thornhill, Ont., went toe-to-toe with Djokovic over the first two sets before fading in the third. The Canadian fired 21 aces but converted only one of two break opportunities.

Jays tackle Tigers with rally in the 9th

In a game that was scoreless until the ninth inning, Brett Lawrie's three-run homer highlighted a big burst for the Toronto Blue Jays in a 5-3 win over the Detroit Tigers on Tuesday night.

After eight innings of crisp, scoreless baseball between the AL East and AL Central leaders, both bullpens came unglued in the ninth. The Blue Jays broke through against Joe Nathan (2-2).

Detroit's Anibal Sanchez and Toronto's Drew Hutchison each pitched seven impressive innings.

Market position

Very clear market position: least expensive new vehicle you can buy in Canada. Aimed at first-time buyers on a budget, urban dwellers who desire a car with a tidy footprint, and serious downsizers of every other demographic. Competition is other small hatchbacks — and used cars.

Points

- Very successful global car. Currently sold in 160 countries — but not currently in the U.S.
- Nissan Canada took three years to develop this exclusive-to-Canada version, based on European-market Micra.
- Shares platform with larger Nissan Versa Note Hatchback.
- No 6-speeds, CVTs, heated seats or navigation availability keeps prices down.

Safety

Six standard air bags; standard front/rear disc/drum brakes with ABS and Electronic Brake force Distribution (EBD) and Brake Assist; standard traction control and stability control; standard anchors and tethers for child seats; available rear backup camera and monitor.

Nissan Micra: Small is a virtue

Review. Short and purposeful, the Micra is a Napoleon Dynamite

MICHAEL
drive@metronews.ca

Small cars have a hard time in North America, the land of the Denny's Grand Slam Breakfast and the 7-Eleven Big Gulp: If we can finish it, you didn't make it big enough.

But a new breed of small cars has been winning fans recently, due to their new-found features and hip styling, which were heretofore only available in larger, more expensive cars. But some of this nice stuff has pushed prices to where many small cars no longer wear small price tags.

Enter the 2015 Nissan Micra. At $9,998, it has the lowest base price of any new vehicle available in Canada. (Destination and PDI charges are $1,400.)

Micra's pricing advantage gets diminished once you move off that S base model with the 5-speed manual transmission. Add automatic transmission, air conditioning and cruise, and you're looking at another $3,000 or so.

But pricing always stays low

PHOTOS: CONTRIBUTED

The five-speed manual is smooth and quick to shift, and feels zippy over all.

It also handles well, due to the European-spec suspension, with an additional sway bar. The Canadian Micra is the only Micra in the world with both front and rear sway bars.

The rear accommodations are predictably tight for a car that stretches just 3.8 metres. But the upside is great agility, and more parking opportunities around town.

Its turning radius is also ridiculously short. You can easily turn around in the middle of most side streets. Sometimes it's good to be small.

You have to hand it to Nissan for finding this low-cost gap in the market, and for wanting to exploit it to get more new customers into the Nissan fold — customers that traditionally might have gone to the used market. Nissan even has a special financing program, just for first-time buyers that choose Micra — no previous credit history required.

and lovely on all three trim levels (S, SV and SR).

The main point is that Nissan gives you a sub-$10,000 option and others don't.

Micra also turns out to be to a great little vehicle. I recently took a very-white, top-level SR model out for a twirl, and was surprised by how much fun it was to drive.

The five-speed manual was smooth and quick to shift, and the 106-hp 1.6-litre engine was torque-y and very agreeable to being revved.

Overall, it feels zippy, which is actually preferable to a car that might be more zippy, but doesn't transmit that feeling to the driver.

Shift: Electric vehicles get a charge out of new markets and great ratings, lightening up on fuel and on roads

Tesla eyes Chinese production

California's Tesla Motors says it will build cars in China within three to four years specifically for that growing market, but not in lieu of building them in the United States. That's in addition to current U.S. production, says CEO Elon Musk.

Tesla plans to spend "hundreds of millions of dollars" building a plant and installing a "big" network of battery charging stations in China, reports Bloomberg News Service. While a location wasn't announced, Musk said local production in that country would allow Tesla to sell cars at cheaper prices there by avoiding China's 25 per cent import tariff on vehicles built outside its borders.

Tesla plans to produce the Model S in China, but for that market only. U.S. production for North America would remain, says the company's CEO. ALL PHOTOS AND TEXT WHEELBASE MEDIA

BMW electric a 'goer' in two guises

Not only is the electric i3 city car different from every other vehicle BMW has ever made, it is also the most efficient, with its U.S. Environmental Protection Agency rating of 117 miles per U.S. gallon-equivalent for the car on battery power alone, 39 mpg once running on its twin-cylinder gasoline generator, and an electric range of 115 kilometres.

By comparison, observes auto enthusiast news website, Motor Authority, those electric numbers are slightly lower than the lighter, all-electric i3, which gets 124 MPGe and has an 130-kilometre range. The range-extended numbers are even higher than the leading range-extended car on the market, the Chevrolet Volt, which returns 98 MPGe and 37 mpg combined on its four-cylinder engine.

The i3 city car is rated at 117 miles per U.S. gallon in electric-only mode.

Shift points

- Chrysler will be the only brand under the newly restructured Fiat Chrysler Automobiles to offer a minivan, and will also be the first to offer plug-in hybrid vehicles. Under a new five-year plan, Chrysler will serve the mainstream audience.
- Despite announcing that production of its Insight hybrid will end this year, Honda says no production changes are planned for its Civic CR-Z and Civic Hybrid models, and that it is committed to the expansion of its hybrid offerings in North America.
- Mercedes-Benz is considering the use of three-cylinder engines for hybrid applications in future compact vehicles, reports Car and Driver magazine.

Solar-powered roads gain momentum

A company that wants to develop roadways with embedded digital signage and dividing lines powered by the sun — and which glow in the dark — has launched a crowd-funding project to help it realize that goal. Startup Solar Roadways last year received a $100,000 US contract from the United States Department of Transportation toward developing its technology.

Testing went so well, says auto news website The Car Connection, the firm "is now looking to go big-time ... to create a system of 'smart' roads." Solar Roadways' interlocking tiles consist of solar panels and circuit boards, covered with a thick sheet of tempered glass; LED lights within can mark traffic lanes and send messages. Heating elements help melt snow and ice in colder climes.

The solar roadways under development have illuminated lines, will melt snow and even alert drivers to wildlife.

VW develops diesel, 10-speed transmission

In the ever-intensifying search to squeeze more distance travelled from each drop of fuel, Volkswagen is developing a twin-turbocharged 2.0-litre diesel engine and a 10-speed automated manual transmission.

At the recent Vienna Motor Symposium in Austria, VW development chief Jakob Neusser said the 10-speed transmission was conceived as a successor to VW's existing six-speed currently used in more powerful models. It is planned for use in both transverse and longitudinal engine applications, which suggests that it will be used in a wide range of VW models.

Neusser also confirmed that a new 236-horsepower twin turbocharged 2.0-litre four-cylinder diesel engine would be offered among a range of powerplants on the upcoming eighth-generation Passat, due later this year.

Steel tech combines strength and lightness

High-strength steel. Automakers can use several grades in a vehicle for optimum performance

drive@metronews.ca

Automakers face two major challenges when they build vehicles. Cars must be strong enough to protect occupants in a crash, but they must also be as lightweight as possible to meet stringent fuel-economy standards.

One product that addresses both issues is high-strength steel, which itself is constantly being improved for better performance.

"There are different types and grades, with unique microstructural characteristics that engineers build into the product," says Ron Watkins, president of the Canadian Steel Producers Association. "It's a tremendous amount of work, but the auto industry is always looking for fuel efficiency."

Steel becomes stronger through three factors: alloys such as manganese, boron or silicon that are added to the molten steel mix; continuous slab production to ensure each section receives the same heating and cooling treatment; and "work hardening," when stamping or forming parts, which alters steel's structure.

By adjusting the ingredients used, or the way the steel is processed, steel-makers can produce various strengths, including the strongest advanced high-strength steel (AHSS). Auto manufacturers may use several grades in a vehicle, depending on each component's function and where it's located, for optimum performance.

In a crash, cars need to crumple progressively, gradually absorbing the crash energy so it isn't

A concept vehicle with high-strength steel components. CONTRIBUTED transmitted to the occupants. Different steel grades can be used to create this gradual crunch, with the highest-strength steel used in the passenger compartment, which has to remain intact and uncrushed.

AHSS is more expensive than conventional steel, but because it's so much stronger, automakers use less of it overall. In some cases, a component made of AHSS could be as strong as one made of regular steel, but contain 20 to 35 per cent less material, which helps to offset the high-strength steel's extra cost. The major benefit is that the car now weighs less, which improves fuel efficiency.

So why not make the whole car out of it? It comes down to selecting the most appropriate product for each component, how strong it needs to be, and the price. A hood doesn't have a heavy load requirement, for example, so an automaker is more likely to make a lightweight version out of lower-cost aluminum than higher-priced AHSS.

All about steel

- Automakers first started using high-strength steel in the 1970s, when a gas crisis made fuel efficiency a priority with buyers.
- Steel strength is measured in megapascals (MPa). Regular steel is around 300 MPa, while high-strength steel usually ranges from 590 to 780. Some advanced steels can go as high as 1,800 MPa.
- Steel's thickness used to be measured in gauge, with higher numbers indicating thinner panels, but it's now more common to measure it in millimetres.
